Forecast for Wednesday 11 Aug 2021

Weather: The odd light shower is possible through the early hours, but otherwise dry with some clearer spells. Then a dry morning with some early sunshine across the eastern Dales but thicker cloud looks likely to shroud the western foothills. Cloud cover will increase through morning ahead of a band of rain which will set in through afternoon. Some heavier bursts are possible, perhaps briefly torrential. Increasingly dry through evening.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 600m: 50% falling 20% by afternoon.

Visibility: Cloud cover may be extensive above 500m across the western foothills through morning and will extend eastwards to all areas by afternoon bringing visibility down to a few hundred metres. Heavy rain will lead to hazy conditions down into the valleys. Best of the limited shelter expected north of Askrigg. Skies will clear through evening although a few patches of cloud may cling to summits.
